Let Wallpaper* entertain you with the ultimate lunch date

Wallpaper's mission is about inspiring the influential and our readers are a discerning bunch – they know great design and look to Wallpaper* for their monthly hit of the latest international style news.

In a recently commissioned survey of 4,000 readers, among many interesting facts, we discovered that 73% work in the creative industries and that 50% travel first class, business or premium economy and take 11 flights a year. They told us that their favourite creative cities are London and New York, and that Brazil and Spain are the creative countries to watch.

So to celebrate our December issue (on sale 13 November), which is all about Entertaining, we asked them to name the movers and shakers (living or dead) of the design world that they would most like to have a lunch date with. Editor-in-Chief Tony Chambers has put together the ultimate seating plan with the top

30 choices and asked our readers where they would like to sit. Our dream lunch dates are taken from the worlds of fashion, architecture and design.

Would Andy Warhol have good table manners? Would he make you a 'superstar' and invite you to the Factory to shoot a movie? Would you prefer to squeeze in next to Jonathan Ive so you were privy to Apple's latest developments? Would Dame Vivienne Westwood delight with her rebellious discourse or would you prefer the more anonymous company of Banksy?

See the Wallpaper* table plan below in editor's notes.

Additionally this issue includes: the history of the cocktail: from Martinis to Mojitos. Top designers take a fresh look at those dusty old games and give us something exciting to play with, including an impossible jigsaw puzzle. We lay the most beautiful tables and show you how to make a great waffle.
