Wallpaper* top design and journalism awards

Wallpaper* is regarded as the highest authority on design and style, and continually redefines magazine art direction. In recognition of this, the judges at the 25th anniversary of the prestigious British Society of Magazine Editors Awards selected Wallpaper* Editor-in-Chief Tony Chambers to win the coveted prize of the New Editor of the Year.

In a story published in The Guardian, in which panel members of the BSME selected the best covers of the year, Men's Health Editor Morgan Rees describes Wallpaper's May 2008 cover as 'one of the finest things that I have seen in a very long time'. He goes on to say, 'In the age of Photoshop, it is rare to see something that genuinely stops you in your tracks.'

This award follows a hat-trick of prizes picked up by Wallpaper* at this year's Press Gazette Magazine Design and Journalism Awards. In fact, Wallpaper* scooped more awards than any other magazine, including the prize for Best Designed Consumer Magazine of the Year (with more than 40,000 circulation). It shook off competition from publications, such as Grazia, Harper's Bazaar and The Sunday Times Magazine, and went on to win the overall award for Best Designed Magazine of the Year. The award for Young Designer of the Year went to Wallpaper's Dominic Bell.

The judges said, 'Wallpaper* continues to innovate. A perfect response to its subject matter. Page after page of just stunning design. The most restrained, considered magazine in this category. A triumph.'
